

Janelle White Dot Temperament Assessment

Video - https://youtu.be/h8TQRGVDE_A

Janelle white dot and Janelle white have very similar temperaments. Janelle white dot actively explores and she gets excited when put in new environments. She has appropriate reactions to new situations. She showed a good balance of independent play and engagement with tester.

When she is put in a new environment, there are no signs of stress. Just happy to be here.

When she is exposed to a stressor like a bath or medical treatment, she shows little to no stress.

When Janelle white dot was introduced to noises or startling sounds, she noticed the sound and quickly moved towards it to see where it came from.

She was curious when new objects were introduced and moved quickly to investigate.

Janelle white dot has good focus with the tester.

She also has a high interest in all treat rewards, (food and praise) which is another motivator for good training.

She is interested in toys and is motivated to play. She demonstrates a good balance of interacting with people and independent play.

She, along with several of her siblings are motivated to problem solve, and are persistent to try and figure things out.

She is not very mouthy, but will use her mouth less than half the time when trying to investigate something new.

During the test, she rarely vocalized in any situation.

She rarely uses her teeth to engage or explore but when she did, no damage due to minimal pressure applied..

She is very polite with her interactions and displayed a gentle nature with tester. She checks to see if it's OK to engage before she does.

When handled she was unsure at first but adjusted on her own.

She demonstrated no possessiveness with her siblings or the tester with toys or food.

Overall, Janelle white dot has a mid-moderate energy level. She is motivated to interact, train, and figure things out with little to no signs of stress in the process.

Loves independent play and human interaction. If given a little time to do it on her own, she adjust very quickly and confident and happy.

Health Notes: Check for small hernia.
