RED is the smallest of the two girls but has the biggest personality.

Shows no fear and loves to engage with people, toys, siblings, baskets, mops...anything really.

She has an adorable confidence and bounces everywhere she goes.

She will be great for kids or busy household. She loves attention and fun play.

PINK was unsure at first but warmed up quickly once she realized how much fun she could have. She would find things to do on her own for a little bit but then would try to get her siblings to engage in play.

Still a little awkward in her movements and clumsy. So cute!

Overall the litter was a bit immature.

Some behaviors like whining, hiding and scratching are related to insecurities. These will change as they mature and build confidence.

They are heavily focused on being rough and tumble with each other right now as that is what is familiar and comfortable to them.

Proper socialization training will be great for their confidence and bonding with people.

Because of their curious nature and good focus they should train very easily and effectively.
