The girls are still a little immature so they tested more nervous than they actually are. They all have the focus and desire to interact but are unsure how to. Their timid attempts to engage with people is very endearing and sweet. They will quickly build enough confidence to engage properly.

Pink - nervous in a new environment.
She will need time to warm up on her own.
She likes to find her safe places and stay close.

White - timid to start. Needs time to adjust to new people, sights and sounds.
Could get overwhelmed in too busy of a home.

Red - a little unsure but didn't seem fearful. She likes to stay close to people. She could be a nice comfort companion for someone. Gentle and mannerly.

Pink dot - Very curious but engages with caution. Has good focus. Such a silly girl.
She uses cute body language to navigate new play.

All the girls are very sweet. Once they are mature and confident, they should still be very easy puppies to be around. Not needy or too pushy with their interactions. They like to be close to people but engage on their own timing.

White - very small hernia

Red - bite is slightly off - should correct with maturity
