Blue - happy fun, loving boy. He likes people toys, affection, and other dogs.

Good with handling. He has a cute curiosity and adorable head tilt.

He likes to stick close by and pay attention to what you're doing. Would be a great prep school candidate.

Good focus.

He will pick people over toys are engaging with his siblings. Potential therapy or emotional support. Mid moderate energy level no red flags.

Green - he found his confidence pretty quickly. Self-assured puppy comfortable to engage. He loves toys and silly play.

He was comfortable to entertain himself and enjoy figuring out new experiences.

Good middle of the road temperament. Easy puppy to be around not too needy or too independent

Mid moderate energy. No red flags.

Orange - timid to start. He would hide behind or under things until he felt comfortable enough to come out and engage. This will change with positive reinforcement and confidence building exercises.

Mid-level energy. No red flags. But needs time to adjust on his own.

Blue dot - sweet, but shy to start. Could get overwhelmed if it's too much too soon without the appropriate amount of time allowed for him to adjust on his own.

He likes gentle attention. And was good with handling.

Mid-level energy

Green Dot - engaging puppy who warms up quickly to new people and new situations. But you do have to gain this trust first.

He loves affection and one on one attention. He is cautious if things get too loud or too fast pace, but does not shy away completely.

He loves toys and pays attention to what's going on around him which both will be beneficial for training.

He has a mid moderate energy level and a good balance of playfulness and calmness. No red flags. Should do well in most home environments.

Orange dot - he was tempted to start and took a while to warm up. He watched from a distance until he gained confidence to interact. But when left alone to figure things out in his own timing, he became comfortable quicker. He's a sweet and gentle puppy.

He could get overwhelmed if it's too much too soon. Just needs time to adjust. Then he is a very happy, playful little boy. Curious of new sites and sounds with a cute head tilt as he trying to figure it out

Building confidence through positive reinforcement training is recommended.

He will be a great family companion. No red flags just needs specific opportunities to build confidence.

Mid-level energy, but should increase as he matures.
